Monday Evening Workshop (3 CEUs)

5:30pm - 8:45pm

Embracing Change and Acceptance Through the Use of Dialectical Behavior Therapy in Substance Use Counseling
Kim Pinkston, LCPC, CADC, BC-DMT, GL-CMA and Don Pinkston, LCSW, CADC, ATE, ADHD-CCSP

Dr. Marsha Linehan, the creator of Dialectical Behavior Therapy (DBT), had a goal to assist individuals in finding “a life worth living”. In our role as substance use counselors, we engage with those dealing with behaviors impacting their quality of life, aiming to guide them in discovering their own “life worth living”. DBT’s fundamental concept revolves around acceptance versus change, emphasizing the synthesis of these opposites. It encourages working towards both acceptance and change, not viewing them as mutually exclusive. The challenge is to navigate moments where change may be difficult or impossible. This workshop will delve into teaching clients and ourselves to embrace acceptance and change through a DBT lens and interventions.

Participants interested in attending this workshop must select it on the registration form and pay the evening workshop registration fee. If participants choose to attend the entire day or other days in addition to this workshop, all registration fees apply.

The intention of this workshop is to enlighten counselors with the struggles that families experience loving someone who has a substance use disorder. Clients and their children feel trapped and hopeless in their living situation and see no way out of it. Counselors can make a difference in their lives and can offer hope to suffering families.

Workshop C

What We Learned from the Psychedelic Renaissance

Bruce Sewick, LCPC, CADC

This workshop starts with a retrospective on how politics and misinformation caused psychedelics to be demonized and operationalized by the War on Drugs. The current approach, of integrating psychedelics as part of the mainstream, rather than counterculture (and how this has resulted in the Psychedelic Renaissance) is then examined. The benefits of the mindful use of psychedelics starting with a review of how indigenous cultures have used psychedelics for societal benefit for centuries is reviewed along with current research.

- 10:15am - 11:45am Workshops D and E

Workshop D

The Psychiatric and Psychological Consequences of the “New” Marijuana

We have seen the passage of legislation by the State of Illinois legalizing marijuana making it available to adults for its recreational use. In addition to the public health and public safety impact, the bio-psycho-social consequences will be reviewed. The recent body of psychiatric and psychological research literature that discusses the consequences of the use of high grade grown marijuana will be presented. The recent body of psychiatric and psychological research literature that discusses the consequences of the use of high grade grown marijuana will be presented, including impacts on Veterans and other special populations.

Workshop E

Engaging Community Members to Support Prevention and Recovery

Donna Nahlik, Nadia Klekamp, and Kari Knapp, CHES

Recovery is for everyone. “Every Person, Every Family, Every Community.” Recovery happens in communities, but how can community members collaborate to build thoughtful and sustainable recovery supports? How do we engage them? Why should they care? Hear how the Center for Community Engagement is working with communities across the state to organize for change. We will discuss how to build on the strengths and resilience of individuals, families, and communities to support individuals and families seeking or maintaining recovery.

Workshop F

Being Comfortable or Being Happy: How Do You Choose?

Cheri DeMoss, MA, LCPC, CAADC, NCADCII, MAC, NCRS

Making choices that enhance our lives is a round-about process requiring insight, a sense of adventure and bravery. Most people confuse comfort with happy. We define getting “it” right as being comfortable. Doing what we were taught to do. A place to get to and then stay there. Being happy is a purposeful manner of moving through our life to learn, expand, understand and enjoy. This workshop will give ideas, techniques and thought experiments to help you decide if you want to stay comfortable or be happy.

Workshop G

Training of Leaders – Navigating the Challenges of Cultural Change

Don Pinkston, LCSW, CADC, ATE, ADHD-CCSP, Pamela Woll, MA, CPS, Giselle Navarro, Ph.D., LCSW, CADC, and Michael Moran, MA, CADC, ICB Board Member

This workshop is for current and future leaders in the field of addiction recovery. In a post-pandemic world, it is even more important to examine how culture impacts how well we work together. Examining workplace culture through the lens of equity, diversity and inclusion provides a framework that can enhance and inform recovery service delivery. Recognizing and understanding workplace culture and cultural humility allows for the removal of barriers to change in our organizations.

Tuesday Evening Workshop (3 CEUs)

Couples: The Rules of Engagement

Cheri DeMoss, MA, LCPC, CAADC, NCADCII, MAC, NCRS

Working with couples where one or both struggle with addiction requires us to have a clear understanding of the patterns and beliefs operating between the couple. Couples are used to battling the relationship chaos rather than looking at the repeated behaviors creating the chaos. This workshop will focus, not only on how to help couples understand the beliefs and the repetitive behavioral triggers, but the best rules of engagement.

Participants interested in attending this workshop must select it on the registration form and pay the evening workshop registration fee. If participants choose to attend the entire day or other days in addition to this workshop, all registration fees apply.

Workshop J

Recovery Support: Unlocking the Potential of the Recovery Community

Mike Tyson, CPRS, ICB Board Member

Illinois is currently experiencing a severe shortage of mental and behavioral healthcare workers. We have long understood the benefits of people in recovery supporting each other but how do peer professionals fit into a field that has traditionally relied upon clinical experience? Unlocking the Potential of the Recovery Community explores the field of recovery support and the role peer professionals play in the continuum of care.

Workshop L

Counseling African Americans with Substance Use Disorders

Mark Sanders, LCSW, CADC, Benneth Lee, MA, CADC and Alonzo Lee

Research indicates that African Americans with substance use disorders have lower program completion rates in substance use disorders treatment and drug courts. This often leads to a return to drug use, families in despair, violation of probation and parole, and recidivism. In this workshop, you will learn strategies to work more effectively with African American clients with substance use disorders. Topics covered include: the ten things African Americans with substance use disorders need from counselors to increase program completion rates and outcomes; effective cross-cultural counseling with African American clients; working with African Americans with substance use disorders from a cultural context; special issues related to work with African American young adults; and facilitating recovery with African American clients through partnerships between treatment and the community.

Workshop M

A Closer Look at Denial

Bob Carty, LCSW, CADC and Shawntrell Moore, MA, LCPC, CADC

While denial is a term often used in treatment and recovery, the nature of this concept is commonly misunderstood. In this workshop, we examine key aspects of denial, including its influence on people with substance use disorders, their family members, and their counselors. Recommendations on how to identify and reduce denial are offered.

Workshop O

Countertransference: Balancing Ethical Practice and Authenticity

Kirsten Leininger, MS, CADC, ICB Board Member

Despite its negative connotations, countertransference itself is not a bad thing. Rather, it's the ignoring of countertransference that gets counselors into trouble. Being aware of countertransference allows counselors to differentiate between what the counselor is feeling versus what is coming up in the 'Here & Now' of the session for the client. In this workshop, the ethical implications and importance of rigorous self-awareness and self-reflection for a counselor will be examined and a conversation on a topic that is often avoided will be brought forth.

IDHS/SUPR Gambling Services: Becoming a Gambling Informed State

Kellie Gage, MS, CAADC and Jim Wilkerson, LCPC

Are you aware that over 1 million people in Illinois experience problem gambling or are at risk for problem gambling? Gambling is prevalent in Illinois through the lottery, video gaming terminals, casinos, and sports betting. However, it's important to understand that what starts as a recreational activity can for some, escalate into a significant problem. Signs of problem gambling include irritability, anxiety, secrecy, and financial dependence. Individuals with substance use disorders or mental health issues may be more prone to developing problematic gambling behaviors. Since the early 2000s, IDHS/SUPR has provided extensive problem gambling training, intervention, and public awareness in Illinois. This session updates participants on the state's gambling services in 2024 and outlines IDHS/SUPR's goals to become a Gambling Informed State.
